OUTING FOR CHILDREN

THREE HUNDRED OF THEM SPEND THE DAY AT TROOST PARK.

First of This Year's Fresh Air Excursions Arranged for Boys and Girls by the Salvation Army -A Noisy, Jolly Party.

"They were a hard lot of youngsters to handle, but it did a fellow good to see the fun they were having." said the conductor on one of the special trains that carried the Salvation Army's fresh air outing party to Troost park and back yesterday. little boys and girls enjoyed the first of the summer excursions of the army and two trains of three cars each furnished free by the Metropolitan company were required to carry them. The time set for starting was 9:15, but many a little urchin who had forgotten about the hour in thinking merely that he was going had slipped away from his sleeping place and on hand at the army tent, at the corner of Eleventh and Baltimore, before dayner of Eleventh and Baltimore, before daylight.

There was no denying the conductor's assertion that it was an unruly crowd, but as he also said, it was a jolly one, and many a busy man and woman wore an extra smile for having seen this noisy party of children start out for a day of unwonted pleasure. All were poorly dressed but many neatly and carefully and evidently the best they had. The gamin was there, of course, but next to him in the marching line, or perhaps in the same seat in the car, might be seen a timid little girl with smoothly braided hair, happy at the prospect of a day on the clean grass and under the trees. With many of the older girls anxious mothers had entrusted little brothers or sisters, hardly more than babies, that they, too, might have the advantage of a day in the fresh air of the park.

At 2 oclock after holding up, and being vantage of a day in the fresh air of the park.

At 9 o'clock, after holding up, and being driven away from in turn, all the cars whether red, yellow or green, that came down Ninth street for the five minutes they waited at the corner of Ninth and Wyandotte the advance guard of the picnic party blockaded the track in front of the two special trains as they came along, and was taken on board without further ceremony.

Some little readjustment was necessary here, as the boys immediately pre-empted the outside end of every seat and would have forced many a little family party to separate but for the intervention of the officers in charge, of whom there were about twenty, including Brigadier Stillwell and Staff Captain McDdwell. It was only occasionally in such cases as this that any show of authority was made. The officers know what it takes to make a good time, and allowed the children to feel that the world and the Metropolitan raflway belonged to them.

At dinner the experience was almost as new for some, but they learned readily and their smilling benefactors in blue and red had all they could do in stilling the cries for more bread, meat, cake, bananas and coffee.

The rain was not a dampener except in for more bread, meat, cake, bananas and coffee.

The rain was not a dampener except in a literal sense. It was just as novel for the children from the shelter of the band stand and boat house to see the surface of the lake darkened by the myriads of little splashes, or to hear the patter of the rain drops on the leaves of the oak trees, as it had been to hear the bird songs or see the wide stretches of green grass. A little before i o'clock a second call was made, for the purpose of disposing of the last of the eatables, and there was nothing but empty baskets to carry back to camp. From their feast of ice cream and bananas the children were marched again to the train, and many a tired little lad and lassie stumbled while looking longingly back at the scene they were leaving.

At 5 o'clock the two trains were back in were leaving.

At 5 o'clock the two trains were back in the city, stopping at this street and that, while one after another and group after group of the now less noisy picnickers clambered down the car steps and trudged away to their homes with hearts sunshing from the memory of the long, happy day.

THE NEWS AT LEAVENWORTH.

Plag Day in the Public Schools-Kick Over Assessments-Editor

The natal day of "old glory" was fittingly observed at the city schools yesterday and much praise is due to Superintendent Dolphin and the various teachers for the and much praise is due to Superintendent Dolphin and the various teachers for the success of an event which cannot but kindle patriotic fire in the breasts of the many children who took part. The high school was the first to float the flag, the exercises beginning at 8:30 a. m. The high school cadets formed in two lines facing the school, while in their rear were the high school members and those of the Central school. Nearly the entire block was filled with carriages and vehicles of every description, while a large crowd of visitors occupied every available space.

The exercises were opened with the singing of "America" by the schools, after which Thomas C. Braidwood, president of the senior class, hauled the beautiful flag to the top of the flagstaff, when it was given a right hand salute by the cadets. W. B. G. Lowe, captain of the cadets, delivered an address, in which he recounted the history of the flag, and told of the struggies and trials of its early defenders. The address was well received and frequently applauded, after which all joined in singing "The Flag of the Free."

Perhaps the best exercises of the day took place at the Oak street school at 10:30 a. m., under the direction of the principal, Miss Josie Rivard. The children, some 550 in number, marched out of the building and formed on the east side of the street, to the music of Professor George Linck's orchestra. After the children had formed the orchestra struck up "The Flag of the Free," during which the stars and stripes was run to the top of the school and many of the visitors uncovered during the ceremony, "America" was sung by all present, after which the orchestra played "America Forever." Rev. Mr. S. Alonzo Bright delivered a patriotic address to the children, after which, keeping step to the music, the school marched into their rooms and shortly afterwards were dismissed. The building, like nearly all others, was elaborately decorated with flags and bunting and the ceremony was witnessed by several hundred people.

At the same hour si

decorated with hage and the ceremony was witnessed by several hundred people.

At the same hour similar exercises took place at the Third Avenue, Maplewood and the North and South Leavenworth colored schools. At each place there was music and an address, which will tend, if anything, to make the rising generation more patriotic than ever.

Kicking Over Assessments.

Kicking Over Assessments.

The board of county commissioners expects to conclude its labors as a board of equalization to-morrow, after which they will adjourn. During the ten days of their session a large number of protests have been filed with the board and many business men have asked that their assessment be lowered. For a number of years past the assessor has been appointed without regard to his qualifications for the place, and as a consequence the place has been given to someone with a "pull and who knew nothing about the value of personal property. Such men were easily imposed on and generally accepted the returns given them in good faith.

This year a practical business man was appointed assessor and he determined to try and make a fairer assessment than had heretofore been returned. The result was that many who had been paying on less than one-fourth of their valuation have had their assessment raised, much against their wishes. One firm whose stock is valued at about $250,000 and whose building and lots are worth about $100,000 more found their assessment raised from $17.400 to $355,000, or about one-tenth of their personal valuation. They are objecting seriously to the increase and will try and have the figures reduced to that of last year. Other merchants who do not own their own buildings and carry a much smaller stock are assessed about $17,000 and are not doing half the "kicking" of their wealthier neighbor.

Those Who Will Teach.

The board of education met Monday night, the principal business being the selection of teachers for the next school year. Only those for the grades were selected, the teachers in the high school will be selected later on. The pay of teachers will remain the same as last year and the assignment to schools will be made by the superintendent before schools open.

Those who will teach next year are Misses Evelyn Dudley, Anna King, Agnes Behen, Lillian Kunz, Emma Herman, Laura Haas, Alice Albright, Clara Drees, Kate Rothenberger, Anna Davis, Nellie McMahon, Kate O'Brien, Josie Rivard, Addie B. Patterson, Lizzie Jones, Libbie Burbank, Olga Gates, Josie O'Keefe, Laura Berry, Edith Johnston, Minnie Williott, Lillie Stier, Mary Jones, Ruth Garrett, Emily Kittlaus, Lizzie Ryan, Hattie Kirkland, Maggie Cochran, Bettie Graham, Araminta Holman, Martha Putnam, Blanch Cassidy, Anna Willcott, Mary Pfeffer-Korn, Cella Bernstein, Sara Ruder, Genevieva Hawes, Lizzie Powell, Minnie Benson, Myrtle Kirkland, M. S. Jor-dan, Gertie Galvin, A. H. Walton, Mrs. M. McKee, Olive Henderson, Mrs. P. L. Tay-lor, Laura Harlan, B. K. Bruce and Mrs. B. K. Bruce.

Eighth Grade Exercises.

With to-night's exercises, some seventy pupils of the eighth grade will receive their diplomas and be ready to enter the high school next fall. Their places will be taken by a still larger class from the lower grades, who are now prepared for a higher education. The graduating exercises will take place at Chickering hall, and, as usual on these occasions, those who go late will hardly be able to get within the door. The following is this evening a programme: Soar—Taybrak, Class.

exercises will wind up with the annual reunion of the High School Alumni Association at Turner hall, Friday night. There will be the usual banquet interspersed with music and toasts. The annual election of officers will be held the, same night.

Given Double Duty.

Owing to the fact that so many of the regular army officers are at the front with their commands, those still at the different posts are kept busy, filling different positions and details. A few days ago Major Camille C. C. Carr, Eighth cavalry, was ordered here for duty as president of an army examining board. The major's station is Fort Meade, B. D., but on account of the absence of Major General Otis, Major Carr was appointed temporary commander of the military department of Colorado. Orders have now reached him detailing him as president of an army retiring board, which will convene at Fort Leavenworth, and before which Captain Frederick D. Sharp, Twentieth infantry, U. S. A.; is ordered to appear. The other members of the board are; Major John M. Bannister, surgeon; Major Junius L. Powell, surgeon; Captain Henry C. Ward, Sixteenth infantry, and Second Lieutenant Joseph E. Cusack, Fifth cavalry, recorder.

Would Not Cook for Him.

G. P. Henderson filed his tale of woe in he district court yesterday and asked that he legal tie uniting him to Rosa Henderson the legal tie uniting him to Ross Henderson be severed by the sharp ax of the law. According to his story the couple were married in 1883, and he states that he was always a kind and affectionate husband. His wife, he alleges, was guilty of extreme cruelty and gross neglect of duty, masmuch as she refused to cook and provide his meals, although she is strong and in good health. To cap the climax of his troubles she has deserted him, so he wants to be freed from the tie that binds and have the costs of the suit taxed up against his recreant wife.

Newspaper Man Joins the Army.

Rewspaper Man Joins the Army.

The fire of patriotism burns just as brightly in the breasts of the newspaper fraternity as in those of any other class. Among those who are imbued with the desire to avenge the Maine and teach the haughty dons the supremacy of the American eagle is John M. Steele, for the past ten months city editor of the Leavenworth Times. Yesterday he tendered his resignation, and this afternoon leaves for Lawrence to Join the recruits for Company K. Twentieth Kansas volunteers. Monday afternoon he met Captain Clark and passed the physical examination, but his name was not announced at the time. ANNUA LCOMMENCEMENT OF KANSAS CITY SCHOOL OF LAW.

Addresses Made by William P. Box land, Dean of the School, and Hon. DeWitt C. Alles-Twenty-eight Graduates.

Before an audience of friends that con pletely filled Lyceum hall, twenty-eight young men last night received diplomas is graduates of the Kansas City School of Law and contributed to the general con encement exercises of the institution. The occasion, the colors of the country being everywhere apparent arranged in effective lesigns, with here and there a little bunch that betokened the colors of the class. The stage was adorned with small sized, rare of commingling blue and white ribbons that betokened the colors of the class. The stage was adorned with small sized, rare palms, while upon the table in its center reposed a splendid floral piece, the offering of women friends to the class of '86. Screened from the view behind a perfect barricade of huge palms to the left of the stage, an orchestra was stationed which aroused enthusiasm during the pauses in the programme with splendidly rendered national airs.

A marked digression was made from the general run of arrangements in exercises of this character in that the graduates were all seated among the audience in convenient places, and the stage was occupied by the faculty and the speakers of the evening. The Kansas City School of Law is distinctly a Kansas City institution, having been established here three years ago with its faculty and corps of instructors chosen from the bar of the city. Its aim is to afford the opportunity of studying law to those who are occupied in other pursuits and are unable to devote their whole time to study. The success of the school has been phenomenal, for in this, its third year, the graduating class numbers twenty-eight and on its rolls are the names of 104 pupils.

The exercises opened with the invocation by Rev. Mr. James M. Cromer. The dean of the school, william P. Borland, delivered an address that was as concise and lucid as it was interesting, and his advice to the class was listened to as eagerly by the audience as by those to whom it was directly addressed.

"There is no easy road to success at the bar," he said, "and, moreover, there is no easy road at the bar after that successis obtained. In this, the nineteenth century, competition is a marked feature of everything, and in law it is just as keen as it is in commercial life. You will find men that are brighter than you in nearly every case that you are called upon to try, and even if they may not be so, it is best for you to concede superiority to them, for that feeling inspires greater exertions, these constant

The greatest intellects in the legal world have not been those whose who confined themselves to dry commentaries and stuck to them, but were those whose general attainments were the greatest."

As an illustration of this he cited Demosthenes, whose orations not only "embraced the texts and the statutes of the Athenian law, but also poetry, history and an intimate knowledge of the ancient arts." As great lawyers, he spoke of Lord Manshield, Montesquieu, Chief Justice Marshall and Chauncey Depew, to all of whom he attributed not only the very highest legal acumen and learning, but also the greatest attainments in general culture and diversified knowledge.

The first scholarship prize of the graduating class, an American and English Encyclopedia of Law, was awarded to James McDonald Chaney, Jr., who attained to the high percentage of $5.5. The second prize was captured by James Calvin Reed, who is now the possessor of Eliot's General Practice. To the best man in the junior class, Kenneth Kent McKenzie, went Merrill B. Bartlett's offering of Beach on the Modern Law of Contracts. William Thaddeus Campbell, Jay McIlvaine Lee, Francis Roy Moore and Burton Linden Short received high commendation for their general attainment of over $4$ per cent in their studies. The presentation of the prizes was made by Hon. Oliver H. Dean, who accompanied each gift with a running speech that was much enjoyed. The presentation of diplomas by the president of the school, Hon. Francis M. Black, closed the exercises of the evening. The list of the graduates follows:
